Revision Sessions Before Half Term

To give you a final booster before you sit an exam, you will attend a revision session with your teacher or the curriculum leader the day of or the day before your exam. Wherever possible, these have been arranged when you would normally have a lesson in that subject (so that you don't miss out on other subjects). Where there is a revision session for a subject that you don't do, you go to your normal lesson. Exams are coloured green, revision sessions pink. To make organisation easier, only the revision sessions that are not in normal lessons are listed below.

On Friday 24 May – your last compulsory full-time day – you will have English periods 1 and 2 (unless you are in the French exam). You will then attend your leavers Mass followed by assembly. There will be an opportunity for shirt signing and saying goodbye to your teachers, tutors, other staff and your fellow Year 11 students. Please note that you will still need to wear uniform for all of your exams after half term, so please don't sign all of your shirts.

HALF TERM

Revision Sessions After Half-Term

After half term, you need to attend school for your exams and for revision sessions, which have been placed just before each exam. You do not need to attend school for other lessons and can sign in/out after you have attended your exam/revision session. If you wish to continue to attend school full-time or for full days (as this will provide you with structure for your revision) there will be silent study rooms provided. These will follow normal school day times, and (to allow the rest of school to run smoothly) you must register in these rooms if you are in school and follow the times of the normal school day.

You need to wear full uniform throughout this time.
